

Martin Scorsese, Wim Wenders, Wes Anderson to be part of upcoming Cannes 2023

New films by Martin Scorsese, Wes Anderson, and Ken Loach will premiere at the 76th Cannes Film Festival. Anurag Kashyap's Kennedy is the only Indian selection.

Indian director Anurag Kashyap's Kennedy will be part of the Cannes Film Festival's official sections. It will play under Midnight Screenings. This was announced today by Thierry Fremaux, the Festival Director, in Paris. The 2023 Cannes Film Festival will take place from May 16 - 27.

Besides Kennedy, the Festival will have the works of Martin Scorsese, Wes Anderson, Wim Wenders, Kore-eda Hirokazu and Todd Haynes. These filmmakers will premiere movies both in and out of competition, meaning only a select few will have a chance at capturing the Palme d'Or, the festival's highest honour. All of these filmmakers are a familiar presence on the Croisette, having screened movies there before.

This time, Cannes will have more women directors – after being criticised for failing to give them adequate representation. There will be a record number of six films from women -- including Alice Rohrwacher's La Chimera, Jessica Hausner's Club Zero, Catherine Breillat's Last Summer, Justine Triet's Anatomie d'une chute, Ramata-Toulaye Sy's Banel et Adama, and Kaouther Ben Hania's documentary's Olfa's Daughters.

The top Competition slot will have several Italian titles from auteurs like Nanni Moretti (The Sun of the Future), Marco Bellocchio (Rapito) and Rohrwacher, who was in competition before with The Wonders and Happy as Lazzaro which won the Jury Prize and the screenplay award, respectively.

The second most important section at Cannes A Certain Regard will showcase the works of emerging directors from all over the world, including a large delegation of films from the African continent, and a first film from Mongolia, Zoljargal Purevdash's If Only I Could Hibernate. A Certain Regard will kick off with the French film Le Règne Animal by Thomas Cailley, whose feature debut Les Combattants won a few Cesar Awards.
