The President of the jury, American actress Julianne Moore, said that the Venice film festival is about people gathering extraordinary work for everyone to discover.

The Lido, overlooking the celebrated St Marks Square in Venice, still looks as quaint as ever, and I could see no visible change. Interesting, for go to any Indian city after six months, and it looks unrecognisable. So much of construction and so many changes! But the Lido in all the three years that I have not been able to go to cover the Venice Film Festival seems to be standing in a time warp.

With the 79th edition which kicked in later on Wednesday with Noah Baumbach's White Noise, headlined by Adam Driver, the island certainly looks far more relaxed with Covid seemingly having run its long and disastrous course. Italy really suffered with huge numbers falling sick and dying.

But the nightmare seems history now – unless the virus decides to return – and Venetians are in the mood to celebrate cinema and summer and sunshine.

And true to this gay atmosphere, the President of the jury, American actress Julianne Moore, indulged in light-hearted banter at a press conference on the Lido on Wednesday morning. She joked, “Everybody has to dress alike, that’s my rule. We’re all going to wear the same thing and eat at the same time.”

On a serious note, she averred, “Curation matters so much. Venice is people gathering this extraordinary work for us all to discover.”

The US actress described her first experience of curation, through her local cinema as a 10-year-old in Juneau, Alaska, where she saw John Cassavetes’ 1971 movie, Minnie And Moskowitz.

Talking about her first visit to Venice in the 1980s when she was working on an American television show, she laughed, “If I had known then I would be the head of the jury at the Venice Film Festival, I would have fallen into the canal.”

Moore’s fellow Competition jurors are French filmmaker Audrey Diwan, who won the Golden Lion last year for Happening, moviemakers Leonardo Di Costanzo, Mariano Cohn and Rodrigo Sorogoyen; actress Leila Hatami; and author and screenwriter Kazuo Ishiguro.

Jungkook's 'Chicotle' will remain as one of the funniest mispronunciations he has ever made.

It is BTS' youngest member Jungkook's special day and fans surely can't keep calm. The K-pop star turned a year older on September 1 and ARMY have poured in wishes on social media platforms. Jungkook has kept his audience enthralled with his performances ever since he debuted in 2013 with RM, Jin, SUGA, J-Hope, Jimin, and V. Popular for his vocal prowess, he is set to impress his fans with an upcoming pictorial project - Me, Myself and Jungkook 'Time Difference' and the teasers have only raised the excitement among his fans.

Besides being extremely talented, the maknae is also among the cutest Kpop idols we have. On the occasion of his birthday, let's take a look at five words and phrases he uttered that will take fans down memory lane.

Brachiosaurus: During iheart Radio's AskAnythingChat, BTS members were seen candidly answering fans' questions. However, what caught ARMY's attention was Jungkook's response to his favourite animal - which he said was "brachiosaurus". His unique answer forced ARMY to google and learn about this animal.

Easy peezy lemon squeezy: Fans can never forget Jungkook's iconic 'easy peasy lemon squeezy' from BTS's historic concert at Wembley during "Love Yourself: Speak Yourself" tour. During the same, Jungkook said he "learnt" the English accent and to prove the same he said, "Easy peasy, lemon squeezy" with perfect delivery. No doubt, it will remain in the hearts of his fans.
